We are excited to be building the home of the future reducing our environmental impact while enhancing the way people live.”

For more than 25 years, Beazer has been a leader in building homes ahead of current standards and beyond expectations. Beazer was the first U.S. national homebuilder to publicly commit that by the end of 2025, every single-family home built will meet the requirements of the U.S. Department of Energy’s (DOE) Zero Energy Ready Home program. The program incorporates building science innovations and practices to achieve at least 40%-50% greater energy efficiency than a typical new home. DOE Zero Energy Ready Homes are verified and certified by a qualified third-party inspector.

“Behind every home we build is a thoughtful combination of cutting-edge construction technology and smart features that contribute to a healthier and more comfortable indoor environment,” Vannelli says. “From improved insulation and ventilation to high-performance heating and cooling systems, every element is selected to optimize efficiency and support long-term well-being for homeowners and their families.”
